The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University (AMS) adheres to the ACGME work hour regulations. In brief, students:

- Must not work more than 80 hours per week, averaged over a four-week time period;
- Must have one day off per week, averaged over a four-week time period;
- Cannot work more than 24 hours in any shift (students may spend up to another four hours in educational activities and/or activities related to patient safety);
- Must have 14 hours off between scheduled work and/or educational responsibilities after working a 24-hour shift; and
- Should have 8 hours off between scheduled work and/or educational responsibilities.

AMS asks students to track work hours on their OASIS evaluation.
